

Comply don't Fry

Continuing professional development through the
GENT BY HONEYWELL TECHNICAL SEMINAR PROGRAMME

TITLE	Comply don't Fry
CODE	–
DESCRIPTION	A presentation which helps remind those involved within the provision of an automatic fire detection system what is actually required under current and forthcoming legislation and standards
EXTERNAL APPROVAL	CPD Service

Duration:

Approx. 1 hour

Who should attend:

This seminar will be particular useful to End Users or people responsible for life safety within properties they own or manage.

Course details

This presentation starts by looking at current legislation and provides an overview of forthcoming new legislation, paying particular attention to The Fire & Rescue Services Act 2004, and the Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order implemented in October 2006. As most of the new legislation is based on a risk assessment rather than a prescriptive approach, we have included a guideline on what a Fire Risk assessment entails and how the government guidelines give further help in meeting this new requirement.

Another Act which affects the provision of the fire detection system is the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 part III, which requires additional consideration to the provision of a fire detection system. Other documents, whilst not legislative requirements in their own right, do provide the detail of what you should provide for the system – the Building Regulations approved documents B & M and the British Standard for fire systems BS 5839-1:2002.

Finally the third party quality assurance or third party accreditation schemes, which will be required by the Fire Services and Insurers as this new legislation becomes effective, are reviewed.

Certificates of completion are awarded to attendees completing the course.

